What are electromagnetic fields? Definitions and sources . Electric fields are created by differences in voltage: the higher the voltage, the stronger will be the resultant field. Magnetic fields are created when electric current flows: the greater the current, the stronger the magnetic field. An electric field will exist even when there is no current flowing.

MRI involves the absorption and emission of energy by nuclei at a specific resonant (Larmor) frequency. The Larmor frequency scales directly with main magnetic field strength (B_0), and for clinical MRI lies in the range of tens to hundreds of MHz. These frequencies are part of the electromagnetic spectrum commonly used for radio transmission.

An infrared flashlight, sometimes also known simply as an IR flashlight, is a device designed to emit light that falls outside of the normal visible spectrum. It usually looks and feels a lot like a standard flashlight, but unless people are using special eyewear or viewing the light through certain recording devices, pushing the "on" switch will seem to have no effect at all.

Therapy Lasers have several common characteristics which are summarised below. Terms: Therapy lasers tend to fall into a particular category of laser light known as 3A or 3B & are often referred to as 'soft laser' or 'mid laser' sources. More recently, the terms Low Level Laser Therapy (LLLT) and Low Intensity Laser Therapy (LILT) have been adopted.

At sufficiently high flux levels, various bands of electromagnetic radiation have been found to cause deleterious health effects in people. Electromagnetic radiation can be classified into two types: ionizing radiation and non-ionizing radiation, based on the capability of a single photon with more than 10 eV energy to ionize oxygen or break chemical bonds.

The main source of information about celestial bodies and other objects is visible light, or more generally electromagnetic radiation. Observational astronomy may be categorized according to the corresponding region of the electromagnetic spectrum on which the observations are made. Some parts of the spectrum can be observed from the Earth's surface, while other parts are only observable from ...
